Nothing can be learned to throw light on the suicide. The members of the family will not converse on the subject. It is learned, however that a fortnight ago Mr. Gowen, when leaving this city for his suburbrn residence, boarded the wrong train and was carried some distance out of his way before he dis-covered his mistake. This may, per-haps, be taken as indicating that his perceptions were beginning to grow less keen and as supporting the theory that the suicide was due to aberration of the mind. It is said that Mrs. Gowen told a close friend of the family that for ten days previous to her husband's last visit Washington she had noticed something strange in his conduct. It is thought by many here that Mr. Gowen's mind became unbalanced through too close application to business, and that the suicide was die to this cause.
